SPEAKS ABOUT HIS

BOOK ON

RICHARD POTTER

The book is a biography of Richard Potter, 18th and early 19th century son born in Hopkinton of an enslaved African mother and white father. He rose to the status of world-class performer and entertainer inside the quirky and fascinating world of magic and ventriloquism. John Hodgson's meticulous research uncovers the remarkable life of this bi-racial traveler and performance artist who managed to navigate the complicated world of early 19th century America.
